Where did you study?

I studied at the Memorial University of Newfoundland. Even though it's further from my , it's a cheaper university than the universities in my province.

Memorial University is the biggest in Atlantic Canada. It is bigger than Saint Francais Xavier, where many of my studied.

I studied there for four and graduated with a Bachelor's . My major was English and my minor was French.

I wanted to study History, but French is more useful for getting a degree. I planned to study for a teaching degree later. I wanted to become a teacher.

Studying at Memorial was but interesting. I learned many new things and took many fascinating classes. I also met many new people, including Daniel Barbour, the of Inglés Desde Cero.

I worked and volunteered while I was studying. I tutored students with English and I worked with who had mental disabilities. I also worked at the restaurant Burger King.

I loved living in Newfoundland. If you want to visit a lesser-known part of Canada with spectacular , I recommend it! Maybe I will go back for a in the future.
